I. THE ILLUSION OF ABUNDANCE

The world is not collapsing; it is being distracted. While forests burn and wars are negotiated as if they were corporate contracts, millions of people repeat affirmations in front of their mirrors: "I am abundance." But what, exactly, are we asking for?

We manifest money as if money were salvation. We visualize cars, houses, and success, but rarely do we visualize the end of hunger or that power may gain consciousness. The illusion is believing that thriving alone in a broken world constitutes true abundance. There is no evolution if the collective home is being destroyed. The ego has learned the language of spirituality and now disguises itself as light.

II. THE SHADOW AND THE SYSTEM

Power does not scream; it organizes itself in closed rooms and silent agreements. It is a system that protects those "above" more than it listens to those "below." However, the shadow does not only reside within the elites, but also within the human mind: in the fear of losing privileges and in comfortable silence.

The psychology of abuse begins with disconnection and the loss of empathy. We are not merely victims of the system; we are the cogs that feed it. When we understand that the collective ego maintains this structure, the responsibility is shared. The shadow only transforms when we look it straight in the eye.

III. THE SPIRITUAL FIRE

The world slowly wears away while we focus on entertainment and financial goals. Money has become the new religion, promising security, but we must ask ourselves: At what point did we replace ethics with numbers as our measure of success? The real fire is spiritual: a humanity with access to infinite information, yet possessing a fragmented consciousness. We have learned to live with the smoke.

IV. THE MANIFESTO FOR THE FUTURE

I reject a spirituality that teaches how to manifest wealth but not how to uphold justice. The true collapse is moral and ethical.

- I choose coherence: That my prosperity does not contradict my ethics.
- I choose clarity: Instead of simply manifesting millions.
- I choose responsibility: To no longer feed the fire.

DECLARATION OF ABSOLUTE AND NON-NEGOTIABLE PEACE

Today, we establish this truth: Peace is not an option; it is a prerequisite. War is not destiny; it is a decision. True security exists when no child knows fear and no nation is wiped away. Absolute peace is radical because it goes to the root (radix): the ego without consciousness.

We do not ask for permission to choose peace. We declare it as an irreversible commitment. The future begins now.

"If revolution exists, it will be internal. Let burn what must burn, so that something more human may emerge."
